

Royal Rehabilitation — gets a facelift

Ten staff from Goldman Sachs JBWere, a financial services company, donated a day of their time to create gardens for the Royal Rehabilitation Centre's Spinal Injury Unit.

The gardening project was generously supported by Oasis Nursery who provided a wide range of plants for each of the garden beds.

The Community Greening Program was selected by the volunteers from JBWere because the project would provide immediate benefits to the clients at the Rehabilitation Centre. The transformation of weedy and tired looking gardens with fresh soil and new plants provides a more pleasant and interesting environment for the patients.

Staff from JBWere lend a helping hand.

The on-going care of the gardens becomes an activity for the patients to engage in with their recreational therapists. The Royal Rehabilitation Centre at Ryde provides care for Brain and Spinal patients following serious injury or disabling illness.

The gardening programs can be supported and maintained through Royal Rehab's Community Relations
