

Anna Rose

Anna Rose is a part-time research assistant in the Community Based Health Care Research Unit. She is assisting case-managers in the Brain Injury Community Team with their studies of case-management procedures.

Anna graduated from the University of Newcastle in 2006 with a B. Occ Thy (hons). During her time at university, she also completed an exchange at McMaster University, Hamilton, Canada. Upon graduation she worked as an Occupational Therapist with a variety of client groups in both acute and sub-acute settings. In 2008 she was appointed as a Post Graduate Fellow at The University of Sydney. While working as a lecturer in the Discipline of Occupational Therapy she commenced her doctoral studies. For her PhD, she is investigating current practice in pressure care and is particularly interested in how the experiences of clients, carers and health professionals can be used to inform clinical care.
